

Relish the Wonder of London's Shopping Stores

Contributed by Mamatiema Goya
Friday, 06 June 2008

For your shopping break in the Capital it's a shrewd decision to generate some manner of shopping itinerary to ensure that you won't let slip any of the most well known shopping lanes, malls and boutiques in the Capital, as there are a large number to cover.

London's downtown areas which take in places including Piccadilly Circus and Leicester Square presents loads of native knick-knacks & collectables at the nearby stores & newsstands on the corners, just stop by any of the carts placed outside the underground and bus stops for the day's best give-aways. Oxford Street is very good for outdoor shopping with just about every mobile outlet you might possibly crave on only one street. When you are in the correct mood for some hardcore retail action & are in need to splash the cash, then there are only really 2 specific stores that you absolutely should take a trip to. These include Harrods & Selfridges. If you're planning to family day out in London shopping then check out Time Out today. Click here to visit the Time Out website.

Harrods is a necessity stop in Knightsbridge, standing tall in all it's fame at 87 to 135 Brompton Road, London. Harrods is the only legitimate store where the extravagant hotel style service that comes hand in hand with brilliant merchandise & an amazing ambience. The several floors & departments sell manufactured merchandise from everywhere around the globe. There are a few diverse bars & beauty shops & hairdressers within, this store is only in support of magnificence and will not in any case accept being anything but only the best it can be.

Selfridges on the other hand is also amazing although it's vaguely more recent than its competitor Harrods. What attracts hundreds of people to visit Selfridges is instantly having their window displays transformed weekly they are always so well merchandised and delightfully themed to draw consumers to new product ranges that they may have within the shop. It is just as pleasing inside the store and when you enter through the main door you will walk directly into the beauty hall that is full to capacity with every brand of cosmetics you could possibly envisage. There is also a food hall with a huge amount of counters having everything from cheese, meat, fish, wine, spirits and dairy goods. There are unbelievable book shops, technology halls, cigar & tobacco stores & each and every fashionable designer brand you could possibly imagine. It will probably take you a day to get through Harrods & Selfridges for that reason it is imperative to make sure you have some period of the day to visit some of the City's selection of other popular shopping malls`.